Adobe Animate CC 2018 v18.0.1.115 Patch [CracksNow] [url removed, login to view] Adobe Animate CC 2018 v18.0.1.115 Patch [CracksNow].Q: How to get pointer in register or separate byte in C I have a function, which has pointer as parameter and need to get a member in it. If parameter is void (*ptr) (void) it would work, but how to do it if it has void (*ptr) (void *)? for example: int a = 4; void (*ptr) (void) = &a; void * p; ptr(p); //need to know p If it is possible, it should be in C/C++, I think with inline assembly we can do it. A: You can't. See the standard: 5.2.4.2 Pointer parameters [intro.object] Certain representations are permitted, including "invalid" representations designed for debugging (e.g., that cannot be converted to void * without a reinterpret_cast). There is no way to store a pointer as a void . For example, you cannot cast int to void * and you cannot use the sizeof trick. I suppose if you have a DLL that exports the function then you could get a pointer to that function's struct and have the caller call a member function to get the data, but I don't see any other way.
