Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus and a method for analyzing DNA, and more particularly to an apparatus and a method for analyzing a sample which contains three or more types of DNA, that is, a probe mixture consisting of DNA fragments hybridized with probes, and a sample containing DNA fragments. 2. Description of the Related Art DNA analysis is often used in identification, monitoring of disease, and so on. By analyzing the DNA contained in a sample taken from an individual, it is possible to identify the individual or to treat and control a disease in an individual, such as a blood transfusion or a drug administration. In recent years, as the biological information technology for analyzing DNA has been improved, it has become possible to analyze not only the DNA of the blood but also the DNA of a biological sample other than the blood, such as semen. However, since it takes a considerable amount of time to extract DNA from a biological sample, it is not easy to analyze the DNA contained in a biological sample.

Furthermore, since DNA is easily destroyed, it is necessary to make a measure so as not to introduce DNA fragments during the extraction of DNA from the biological sample. In order to solve the problem described above, a technique of deoxyribonuclease I (DNase I) digestion and a technique of lysis have been proposed. In the technique of DNase I digestion, since a sample is broken with DNase I after the DNase I is bound to DNA, the original DNA is released (see US 2003/0137471A1, for example). However, the method can only be used for the DNA that can be bound to DNase I. In the technique of lysis, since DNA in a sample is lysed with a lysis reagent containing a chaotropic salt, the original DNA is dissolved (see US 2005/0101140A1, for example). However, the method has problems in that the amount of DNA obtained by this method is too small and that the method is time-consuming. Q: Для чего испол
