Breech rupture of the uterus in pregnancy: a case report. Uterine rupture during pregnancy is an uncommon complication. It occurs most often during the second or third month of gestation and is more frequent when the fetus is breech in presentation at term. Management includes termination, cesarean section, or emergency cesarean section. Laparotomy and transperitoneal repair were both performed. This case report emphasizes the need for proper patient selection, preoperative and postoperative radiologic examination, and good surgical technique.

- Adds an equipable glowing helmet to your Inventory. - The helmet can be used as a hat. (Boots, armor, belts, and helmets do not count for this purpose.) - Hat-equipping will override the current map-specific hat, if one is equipped. - Uniting this helmet with another "Glowing Helmet" can also be done. - Hat has an optional glowing animation. - Hat can be equipped and removed from your inventory. The "Glowing Helmet" is a "Hider and Seeker" item, it will activate when nearby enemies are "Seeked" and the enemies want to escape from you. The only visible item in this helmet is the glow animation, therefore other items equipped on the head are disallowed. Hunting or sneak attacking enemies won't disallow usage of the "Glowing Helmet". The helmet must be equipped as a hat first and can be used at any time (doesn't need to be in your inventory). When a character with this helmet is attacked by an enemy, the helmet will only glow for a short time. (Usually a second or less.) If a character with this helmet is attacked by another character with another glow-helmet, the helmets will briefly pulse together. The glowing helmet has an independent ability cooldown (separate from the primary ability). The triggering ability of the helmet is limited to three targets - one of them must be a nearby enemy for the helmet to glow, and the helmet must be equipped on the character's head. The helmet is equipped in the top-right corner of the inventory list (there is no inventory page). If you activate the helmet's ability, it also automatically opens the "Cooking Pot of Soup" achievement. Use the minimap to locate your enemies or tap "B" to open your backpack to search your inventory for the helmet. Ahead of the boss battle, equip a "Lasso" to instantly grab a desired enemy. The "Glowing Helmet" can also be accessed from the Inventory tab, but you won't be able to equip it. All hats that are equipable (as opposed to map-specific hats) are automatically equipped, even if you don't have that hat in your inventory. This helmet is a "Hider and Seeker" item, it will activate when nearby enemies are "Seeked" and the enemies want to escape from you. This helmet will activate all abilities that have the word "Seek" in their activation description (e.g.

What's new in Josie's Tank:

Hill Climb requires you to finish one of the 25 steep hill climbs within a 10-mile (16km) course. Each day is exactly the same, with the same hills going up and down, and the same game of go between the driver and the checkpoints. I was in it for the money, literally. I had 30 grand in my pocket and I wanted to know how I could get more. So the next day I bought a bloody expensive mountain bike, and dragged it to the hill climb! Sure enough, I got over the course about 400 yards before the leader and somehow managed to ride my bike over the fence. A policeman rushed over when he saw me go over the fence; he explained to me that if I went back over the fence, I could get a court of law but if I just returned home it wouldn't be a problem. In other words, I could either spend a few months of my life in a prison, or a few months in a mental institution. Or just go home. Rationally I could see what all this was about. The money was just an excuse but going over the fence just meant throwing a spanner in someone's busy life for a few min. I could do that for a few grand or steal me a mountain bike and get real punishment! So I walked home, thinking about my options. Tough decision as to what I should do. Should I steal the money and get a month in a psychiatric hospital, or get a kick up the hole on a mountain bike! I decided that I'd have a go at stealing the money! More later. One's a lawn-mower. The other's a bit of barbed wire wrapped around some sharpened stumps with tin drums on the end. Can you see the difference between these two up close? If you think you can, you're hardly likely to hit anything on the ground with one! The fact that I don't make the obvious connection between the two is nuts! Case in point: my hands sweat on mild days but in scorching heat my hands also blister. Oh, and I also get "breathless" when I work a lot. Naturally,
