X.Treatment of solitary cavernous hemangiomas of the liver by transcatheter hepatic embolization. In 1993, the authors successfully treated two solitary cavernous hemangiomas of the liver with transcatheter hepatic embolization. We report the clinical course and the results of treatment with this technique in 21 patients (eight men, 13 women) with a solitary cavernous hemangioma of the liver. The age of the patients ranged from 22 to 72 years (mean, 48 years). The lesions were located in both lobes of the liver in 12 patients, in the right lobe in seven, and in the left lobe in two. The size of the cavernous hemangioma was varied from 6 to 30 cm in diameter (mean, 18 cm). The diagnosis was confirmed by computed tomography (CT) in all patients. The therapeutic procedures were transcatheter hepatic embolization in 10 patients and transarterial injection of OK-432 in 11 patients. All patients were treated via hepatic artery in 20 patients and portal vein in one patient. Follow-up CT scans taken after the treatment showed no significant change in size in eight patients. However, these patients showed a decrease of size and stabilization in three. In 13 patients, the size of the hemangioma decreased, remained the same, c9d1549cdd
