In answering the letter, I think of the letter's author as a child who has been stranded at sea. Since he's not been able to contact his family, what could it be like for a child who's been stranded at sea? Probably he is wondering what to think, what are his options. On the other hand, I'm sure his parents have been going through similar thoughts. They also may have once had a dream about the sea. Have dreams become a reality? Is the dream actual, or is it in our heads? Is life just a dream, or is it something true that can help us learn what to do and what to think about? Really, I don't know enough about the idea of taking the sea for a dream, a dream that is more interesting than reality. But if we were to @RULEZZZ I have a question. Why do you need to find someone to sponsor you? If you are getting some already why not make one of your missions, "Guess who we are" and have a game where you work your way up to getting a sponsor. I am not sure how an ad campaign would work either, I am not that good of an advertiser but I am decent.
