Pat Kelly, creator of the Highwayman Showbike, shared the news on his Facebook page. "I only received my award last night and it's so exciting," Kelly said. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method of correcting waveform distortion on a signal waveform that has been sampled. 2. Description of the Prior Art In the case where a signal waveform is sampled and then subjected to waveform correction, the waveform-corrected signal must be output at the same frequency and in the same phase as that of the un-corrected signal. In the case where a sampling signal, e.g., a pulse signal, is used, waveform distortion occurs due to the offset in the level of the pulse signal, i.e., the average value of the sampled signal, and the timing of the sampling pulse.

Hence, in order to output the waveform-corrected signal at the same frequency as that of the un-corrected signal, it is required to find the offset in the signal level that is to be corrected, and also to find the timing where the waveform-corrected signal should be output. In a conventional waveform correction apparatus, the offset in the signal level of a sample signal and the timing where the waveform-corrected signal should be output are found by detecting the envelope of the sample signal. After the offset in the signal level and the timing where the waveform-corrected signal should be output are found, a waveform-corrected sample signal is output. Although the conventional waveform correction apparatus is effective when the waveform distortion is within a small range, when the waveform distortion is severe, waveform correction is performed by searching the offset in the signal level of the sample signal and the timing where the waveform-corrected signal should be output. Thus, if the offset in the signal level or the timing where the waveform-corrected signal should be output is found to be large, then a large portion of the waveform-corrected signal is added to the waveform-uncorrected signal, and a portion of the waveform-corrected signal is output at the same phase as that of the waveform-uncorrected signal, so that
