1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a rotary-type connector plug for connecting two or more terminals inserted into terminal accommodating chambers arranged in an end portion of a housing main body to two or more conductor parts arranged outside the terminal accommodating chambers.
2. Description of the Related Art As this kind of rotary-type connector plug, one in which a plurality of conductor parts are arranged in a circle around a plug main body, and a housing main body is attached rotatably to the plug main body, and this housing main body has terminal accommodating chambers for accommodating terminals inserted into the conductor parts, is known from Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. H8-274342. Here, a concave portion is formed in a center portion of the housing main body, and is expanded to a circumferential portion thereof. When inserting the terminals into the terminal accommodating chambers of the housing main body of this type of rotary-type connector plug, the terminals can be inserted in the state where the housing main body is attached to the plug main body. Also, a locking pawl is formed in an inner circumferential portion of the housing main body, and a projection is formed in an outer circumferential portion of the plug main body. When the two are attached to each other, they are locked with the locking pawl formed in the housing main body and the projection of the plug main body. On the other hand, when it is necessary to separate the two into which they have been inserted, the rotary connector plug is rotated in a state where the housing main body is locked in the plug main body. Since the housing main body is locked with the plug main body, a dead angle is created between the inner circumferential wall of the housing main body and the plug main body at the time of the rotation. When this dead angle is large, the rotating operation becomes difficult

Islamic State Group Challenges Canada's Fight Against Radicalized Youth The Islamic State group has struck out at Canadian authorities after two Canadian teens were arrested and charged for allegedly planning to travel to Syria to fight for the extremist group. In a press release distributed this morning, the group said Canada's fight against its recruitment efforts has been an insult to the Muslim community in the country. The group claims Canadian authorities arrested the teens in "a fake operation" after failing to follow up on numerous tips about several Canadians traveling to Syria. The two arrested teens are alleged to have been recruited into the extremist group about a year ago and were allegedly planning to travel to Syria this April. "Canada is now financing a war against Islam at home," it said. The release named the teens as 19-year-old Michael Zehaf-Bibeau and 23-year-old Manbazar Sunjid Ali. It claimed the teens were recruited on one of the group's forums. They also claimed three British and one U.S. man who tried to join up with IS in Syria were killed while fighting for the group there. Canada and the U.S. have denied the accusations. The CIA did not immediately respond to a request for comment. The release urged
