Recaptcha here one picture per line. The Instrument Recaptcha here one question per line. An optional sequence of pictures to display after the form is filled out (optional). The Recaptcha hidden field contains the reCAPTCHA frame, allowing validation that the solution to the puzzle was not manually entered. If your form contains no Recaptcha, the validation will not be performed. In other words, using the same "code" will show the same captcha (depending on the number of questions and characters) whereas the same "code" used to fill in all questions will display different captchas for each question. I tried to use the same image to be displayed on the form and the on the contest page. The image I got was okay for all the forms except for the last one, the closest to the end of the contest, where the image was not displayed correctly. In theory, the same image I used as a part of the form should also be used as an image on the contest page, but in this case my photoprint image was being displayed all the time even though I specified the image I used on the form in the same way. I have read through the forum posts regarding this problem, and also tried the solutions on the suggested links. If anyone has a solution, please let me know. @fH, You are right. Thanks. I thought it was a pretty interesting framework to spend some time looking at it. My app is called Trezer and has an online API for retrieving and storing images. I thought I would share this as we are both doing things similar to what we do. If you ever want to take a look: You can download it here: You don't have to install any python packages, itâ€™s already setup for you. Happy to hear from you.
