Plugins: In the past, 3rd party plugins have not always been available for. MadCar is a plug-in for quick rigging of wheeled vehicles and their .Q: One-hot encoding many binary variables I have 80 binary variables. Each of which, at each time, can take a value between 0 and 1. In total, I have  $80 \times 80 = 6400$  binary values per time step. Is there a good way to one-hot encode these values? I have thought of three options: Option 1: `i = 1 do { if s == 0 (y[i] = 1) else (y[i] = 0) i = i + 1 }` Option 2: `i = 1 y = 0 do { if s == 0 y = 1 else y = 0 i = i + 1 }` Option 3: `i = 1 do { y[i] = 1 i = i + 1 }` Option 2 seems like a good option, but it could cause some issues if we later change the number of binary variables. As long as we are dealing with just a handful of binary variables, I'm not too concerned. The third option seems reasonable, but I'm not sure if there's a better option. A: I think that this is a common problem. I have the same problem. I use this code. Then make sure that the following data is correct. That can prevent a error in the later stage. `import numpy as np a = np.array([[0,1,1,0,0,1], [1,1,0,1,1,1], [1,1,0,1,1,1], [1,0,0,0,1,1], [`
