Goconsa Hack apk 1.0.1 Full Version torrent.The very first - and only - GIF to feature a tweet went live last week, offering a rudimentary pixelated thumbnail of a tweet, or a "banter" or debate as it's frequently called. Of course, users were quick to try to make their own images out of other sources. Five days later, creator Kyle Kingsley released an update that allowed users to change the source of the original tweet. The purpose was to entice people to customize images with other kind of content. Since its launch, the tool's only real success seems to be the viral Tweet "a gif" that has been retweeted more than 11,000 times. But this weekend that first version of a tool that's still in beta had its first official update. The new version, which is called GIF5, lets users make a GIF out of a variety of other content. "I wanted to create a tool that allowed people to make their own images without worrying about the initial content," Kingsley told TechCrunch. "I wanted to make it so that anyone could use any image and then edit it to suit the image they needed." GIF5 is still based off his Google Plus app, but uses Twitter's API instead of Google's. According to Kingsley, the goal of it was to create a tool that was a companion to Google's search tools and Google Plus, but that people could use on their own. Users create new GIF5 by taking a picture and then adding new text, moving text, or replacing the image with another using new iOS apps like pic-a-pic or animated GIF or the Twitter app. On the iPhone, you can use the Twitter app itself to add a new tweet, or users can send the image to Twitter using Twitter share. For both the iPhone and Android apps, the GIF5 are created using the new live tile option inside the apps. 📌
