Computer Viruses By now, you've likely heard about the term 'computer viruses'. These are computer programs, which have the potential to harm your device or even get control over it without you ever knowing. It doesn't have to be a virus that gets onto your computer - a number of malware and spyware programs have been designed in the past few years to capture or steal information. It could be a lot of trouble to recover your data, so it's best to back it up as soon as you have it. The number of cloud services available means that it's easy to save your information to a different location and have your data accessible anytime. It's important to know that anti-v
