I have used the update from the Adobe website quite extensively, While the development went a little bit slower than expected, with every new version the UI, the functionality, even the capabilities themselves did increase right in front of my eyes. Perfect for someone who wants to get started immediately after the release, but unfortunately this is currently not available for amateur photographers! The main problem is that you cannot edit your keywords in the cloud version, meaning that you cannot publish your photos to the website. Whether this will change in the future is not yet known (I haven't created any more test shots recently), and as the development seems to be moving at full speed, Adobe will probably implement the ability to edit keywords in the cloud version soon. For those who want to experience a little bit of the work flow aspect of the latest Photoshop and Lightroom version, I would recommend to download the Creative Cloud version and play around with it a bit. Even though the CC version is a bit more expensive than the normal version, the update will be as smooth as before! Forget all of the concepts you have built up over the last four years; you can upgrade your knowledge base in only a couple of weeks, and you will learn something new every day! While I will miss the search bar because of the setting limitations, I now use it to go directly into my task or contact. I can even create new tasks or contacts using this mode without having to log in through the application! The great thing is that all of these drastic new features can be used immediately after install, meaning you are in full creative mode already!
