But Photoshop has always been the de facto choice for professional photos. What's new in Photoshop is nothing groundbreaking. A lot of the stuff you would expect to see is on the horizon like Photoshop Touch for mobile devices and standalone Photoshop CC. However, there are a multitude of small new features that are no-brainer updates. There are a handful of new Glyphs for things like text wrapping, Script menu customization, and Quick Selection tool enhancements. I'm usually a bit wary of large feature updates that overshadow more expected enhancements. And what you see on the surface isn't always just what's there.
