Alfred Bester's Fondly Fahrenheit and The Country of the Kind eBook.[Role of metabolic factors in the genesis of nausea and vomiting]. Metabolic factors are involved in nausea and vomiting as well as other symptoms during the menstrual cycle. Temperature fluctuations of course of the menstrual cycle influence the incidence of migraine as well as the resistance to emotional influences. Metabolic factors may influence both the incidence and the duration of migraine as well as the development of seasonal affective disorder. It is important to understand their roles in the pathogenesis of nausea and vomiting. Unhappiness is a product of increasing negative internal and external stimuli, which leads to the generation of food chemicals, known as emesis, which in turn induce negative emotions. It is worth noting that all the factors studied are frequently observed in other diseases, such as clinical depression, panic disorder, and functional bowel disorders. The symptom of nausea and vomiting in these patients, however, is infrequent. Therefore, it is thought that nausea and vomiting may be the most specific indicators of emesis. Accumulation of the body heat and the immun
